As a visual artist my work relates to drawings I make from life, capturing people absorbed in work and play. I am passionate about drawing and continuously try to find new ways for audiences to engage with drawings that will capture their imagination and attention. With National Theatre of Scotland, I developed an interdisciplinary approach involving live drawing in Japanese ink unfolding on a screen via projection and interacting live with a narrative onstage. Many multi-disciplinary collaborations, such as with writers, performers, dancers, sound artists, composers, and AI engineering specialists, have put this into practice. These interdisciplinary collaborations can be viewed through the mediums of theatre, audio-visual installations and Japanese ink drawings on rice-paper.

In parallel to these performances I have built up a significant track record in collaborating with Scottish industries. I have had behind-the-scenes access at Speyside Cooperage, stood on helicopters in gigantic hangars at Aberdeen Heliport, and captured life at the shipyards of Aberdeen, Knockando Woolmill and livestock auctions at Thainstone Mart. This multi-award-winning body of work capturing contemporary life at some of Scotland's most iconic industries has been exhibited in solo and group shows between 2015 and 2019.
